Monday night,

Dear Nell.

How did I know you were going to the skating party you ask? Simply mental telepathy and nothing else. And you that that I didn't know you were flirting with Checkers eh? I got even with you by tickling the heart of a fair one up here by use of loving words, so There! revenge is sweet. I have fully resolved not to kill my deadly rival & honourable opponent for your fair hand as there would be considerable trouble in collecting the remains. I warn you however; that you must not flirt or make love to him by means of correspondence.

The result of any such actions on your part will be the increase in my in-profanity vocabulary. "So saith the prophet."

I received the knife today and was glad to get it as I only had two left. I also got the letter as you of course know.

Saturday night Finley & I went out to the Gym to see the Freshman Varsity Football game & while there I lost my purse with $2.3 in. All I had in fact. You can just imagine how I felt Sunday morning when I found it was gone & I didn't know where I'd lost it or anything about it except that it was gone. That afternoon I went out to gym and went under the seats where I ^{had been sitting} ~~had sat~~ and looked in vain for fully five seconds. and as ^{they found it} ~~as if~~ next to the wall. I felt (like) I'd just found out some one loved me & hell all of a sudden or in other words if I'd have been at home I would have celebrated immediately.
